Lessons, Memory Hints and learning features

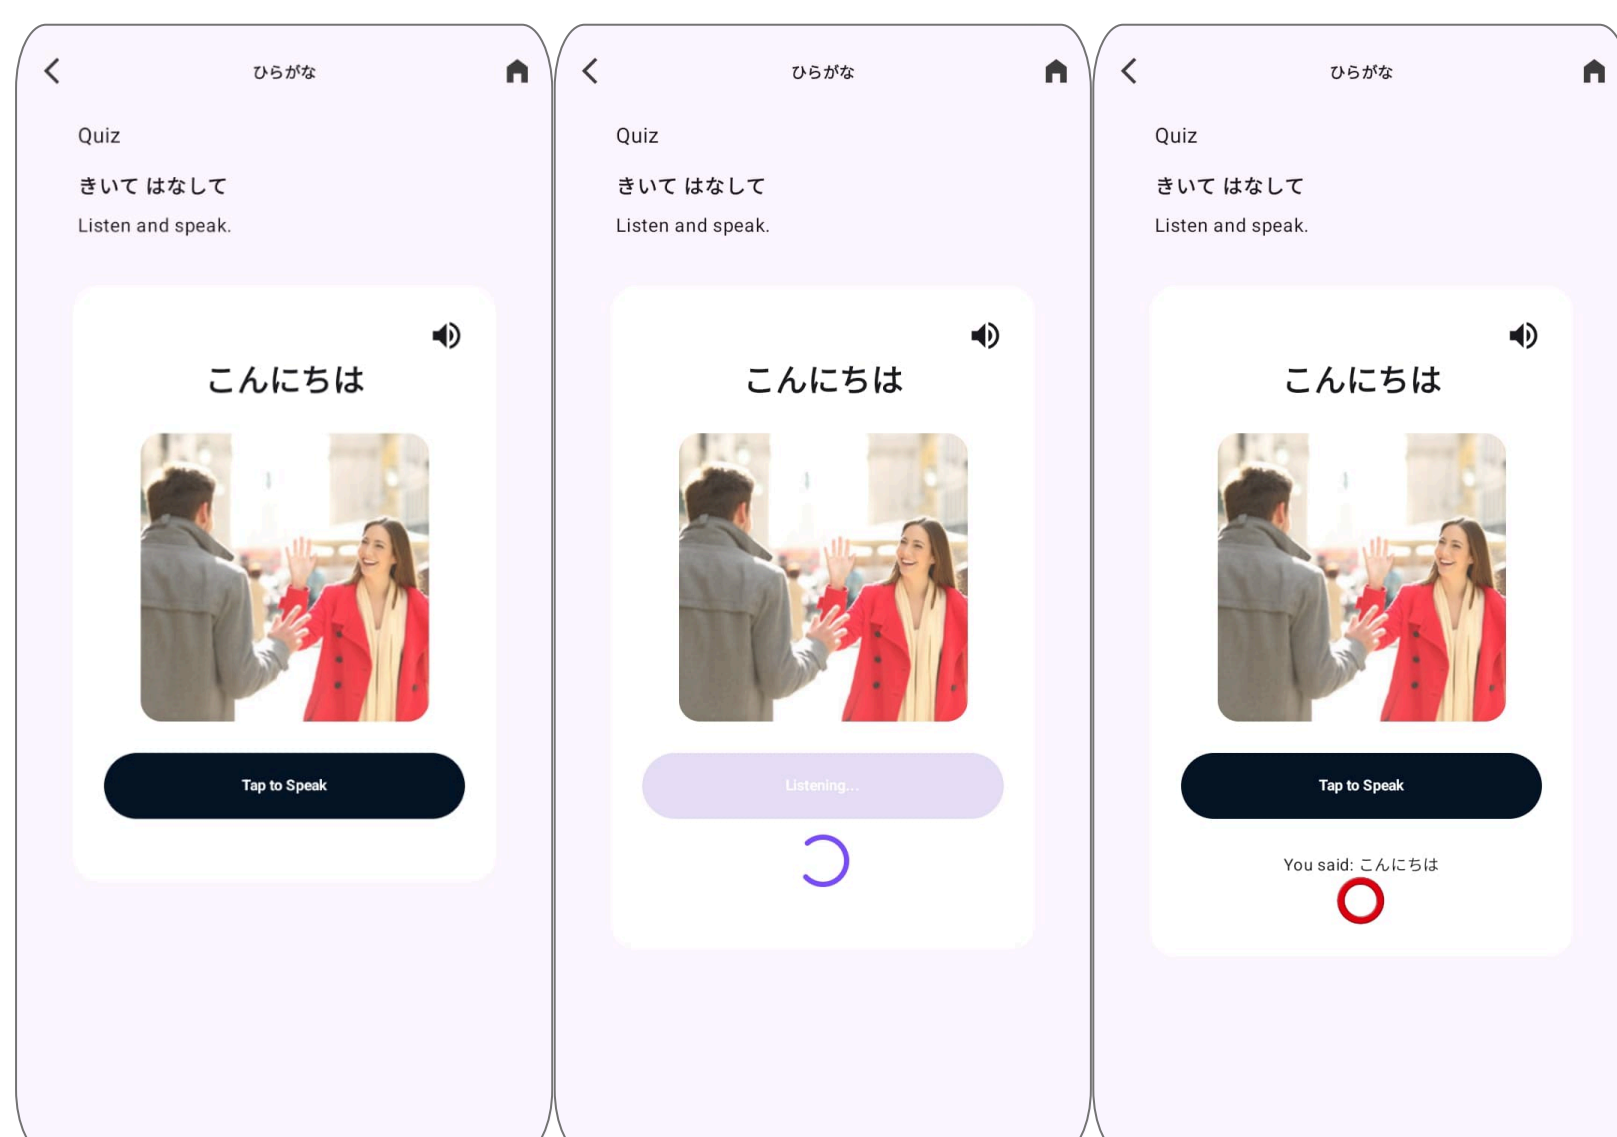

At TangoGO, we make learning fun, but we're also serious about effective teaching! Each TangoGO course is made up of units that focus on communication goals, and each lesson covers the vocabulary and grammar. Right from the start, you'll interact with the language by completing lessons on reading, listening, speaking and writing to build up your proficiency.

In each lesson, you'll study just a few vocabulary and grammar topics in bite-sized lessons that make learning fun and accessible.

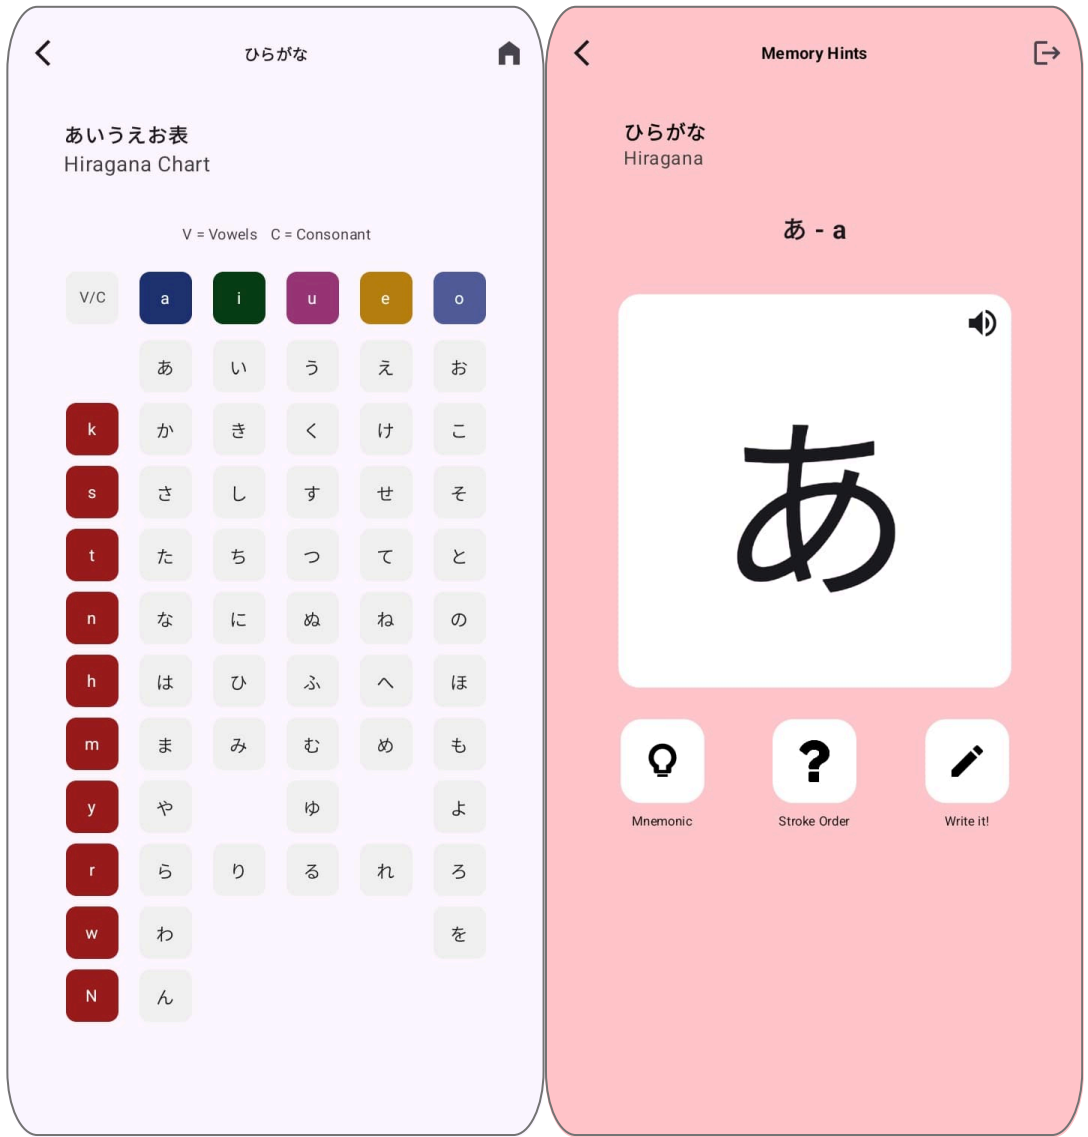

Lessons begin with easier exercise types, and they get a bit more challenging as you progress—for example, in earlier exercises, you might learn to recognize a new word, and eventually you'll be choosing it out yourself without romaji. Each lesson also includes personalized practice lessons that are unique to each learner: The exercises in your practice lessons focus on content that it's time to review and specific mistakes you've made.

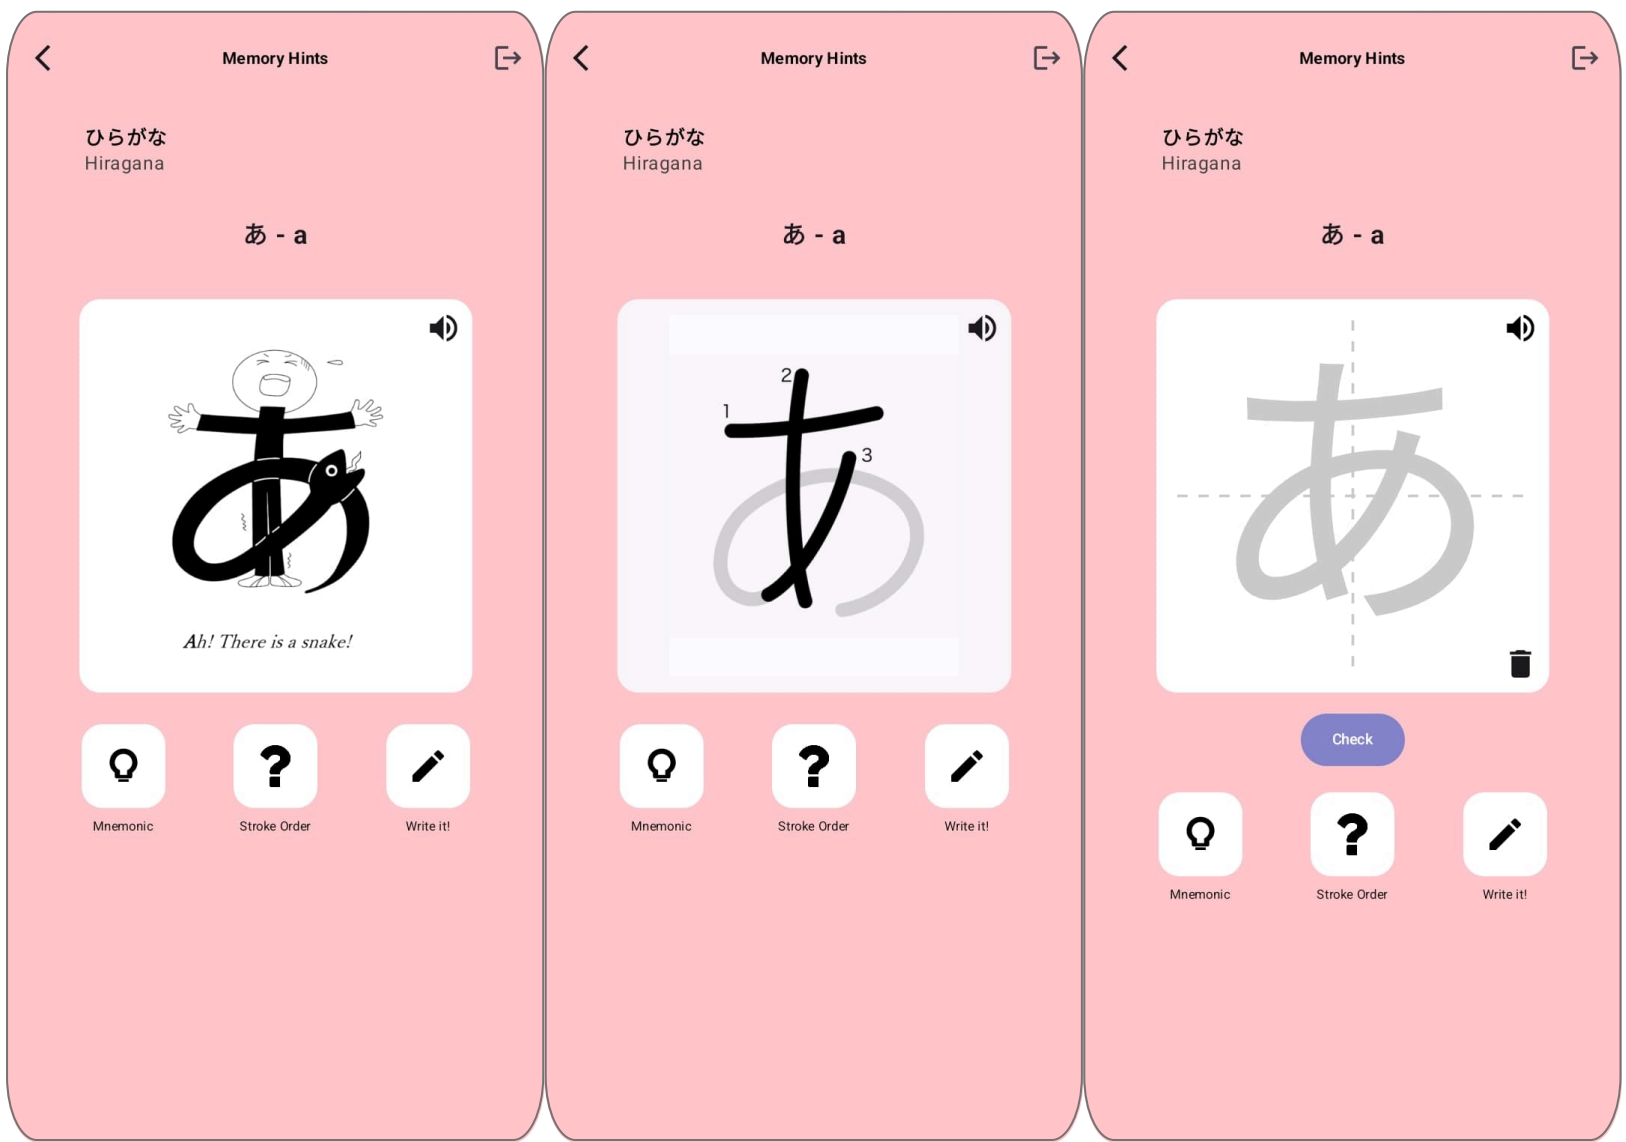

Some lessons may involve speaking practice. Tap the audio icon to listen to the word. Then, click the “Tap to Speak” button and wait for the “Listening...” prompt to appear. Once ready, speak the word as you heard it. The system will then evaluate your pronunciation and indicate whether it is correct or incorrect.

Learners studying languages with a different writing system, like Japanese will also find special lessons dedicated to reading practice. You'll learn to associate the characters or letters used in the language with the sounds they represent.

The section above provides memory hints for Hiragana characters. Users can click on each word to view its corresponding character in detail, as shown in the image below. Selecting the “Mnemonic” button will show a memory aid for the character, while the “Stroke Order” button will play a video demonstrating how to write it correctly. The “Write It” button opens a writing area where learners can practice the character and receive feedback on accuracy. Additionally, users can click the audio icon to hear the correct pronunciation.

Free, fun, and effective language learning!
